Camerons Stiff Market Update

Our predictions for 2020

After nearly four years of political and economic turbulence we now have a clear tailwind behind us to proceed into 2020 with no referenda or general elections. I believe the general consensus, regardless of your own political persuasion, is a widespread belief that a more stable political landscape (and Investment landscape) has finally arrived, at least for the most of this year.

My own prediction for 2020 is that not much will change whilst the UK are in the transitional arrangements with the EU after our anticipated departure date at the end of January. I am sure there will be plenty of political posturing towards the end of the Transitional Period (December 2020) whilst 'Deal or No Deal' negotiations take place that could well have a cooling effect the property market. On this basis, any client contemplating selling should consider marketing in the earlier part of the year.

In-depth local market experience combined with a proactive ethos in anticipating future market trends is why Camerons Stiff & Co have led the way in challenging market conditions and some of our corporate fellow agents have floundered, closing offices in vast cost cutting exercises.

Prices have fluctuated over the last couple of years and I do hope you take up the offer of a revised current (free of charge) market appraisal with myself or one of our experienced members of staff.

15 great things to do in London this weekend

As any estate agent can tell you, a successful sale hinges on a good first impression. Prospective buyers possess a sixth sense when it comes to viewing a property and if things aren't up to scratch – inside and out – you can guarantee they will spot it.
